A group of people are participating in a community art project on a grassy lawn in front of a large, ornate stone building. White lines are drawn on the grass, forming a large grid pattern. Several people are standing within the grid, some holding white buckets and others holding paintbrushes. A small sign on the grass reads "Dr. Phil".

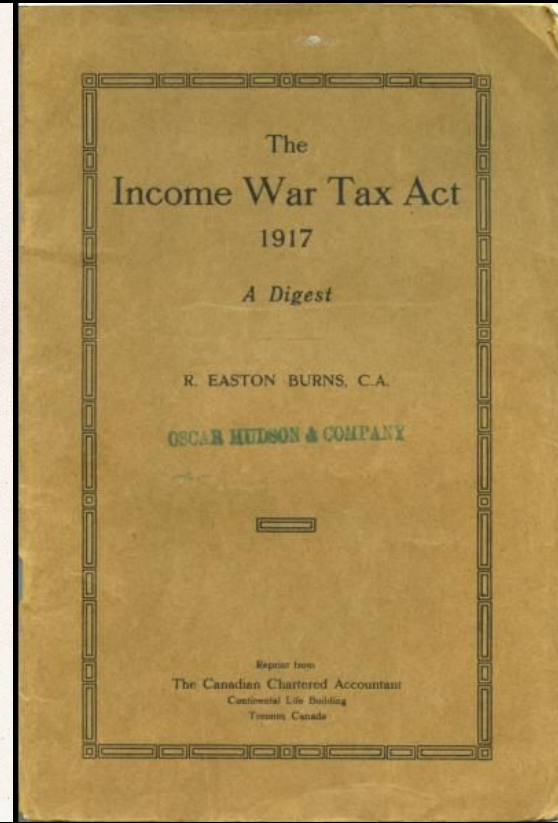

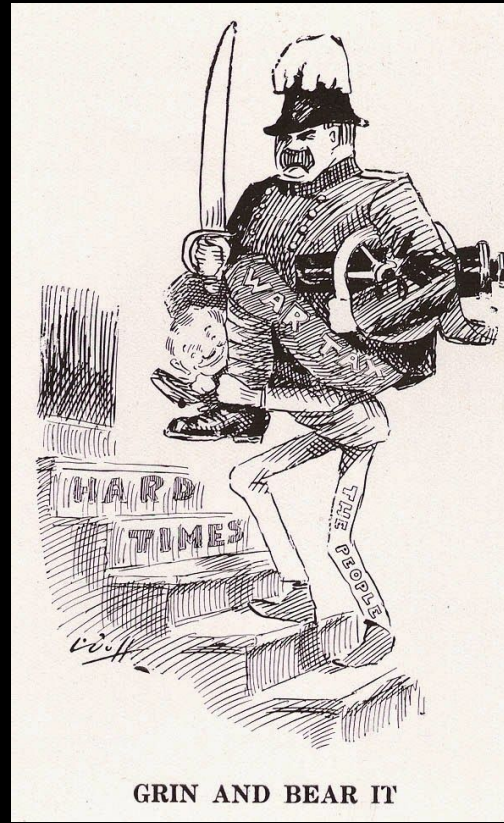

A group of people are gathered on a grassy lawn in front of a large, historic stone building with Gothic architectural features like pointed arch windows and multiple chimneys. The lawn is crisscrossed by white ropes tied to stakes, creating a series of interconnected hexagonal and triangular shapes. Several people are scattered throughout the scene; some stand within the rope-defined areas, while others are positioned at the intersections or edges. In the foreground, a man in a dark jacket and cap stands near three white plastic buckets and a small pile of colorful fabric. To his right, another person holds a red sign that says "DrPH". Further back, other participants are visible, some holding umbrellas, suggesting overcast weather. In the background, beyond the lawn, there's a parking area with several vehicles including a white box truck and a pickup truck. A tall flagpole with a Canadian flag is also visible against the sky. The overall atmosphere appears to be one of a public event or community engagement activity.

Political Stripes Aside

We kindly ask that everyone shed their political stripes and focus on directly asking Drew Jones and Climate Interactive to enter specific climate policies into the simulator.

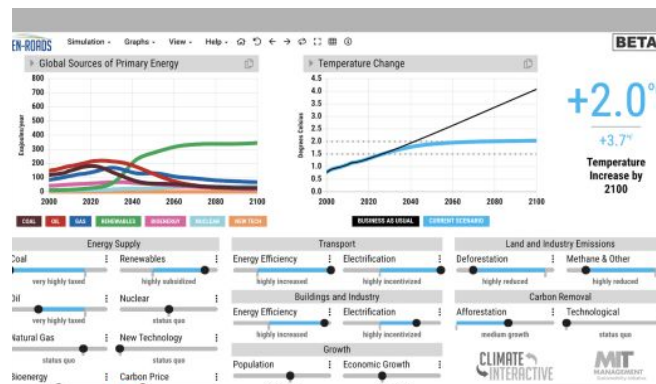

Please refrain from promoting your own political party's policies or commenting on the climate policies of other parties.

Just focus on asking direct questions like this:

“What happens when we maximize _____?”

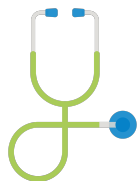

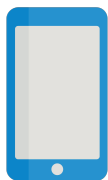

“Can the simulator show “what happens when you do _____?”
